NASA astronaut Nicholas Patrick, STS-130 mission specialist, participates in the mission's first session of extravehicular activity as construction and maintenance continue on the International Space Station. During the six-hour, 32-minute spacewalk, Patrick and astronaut Robert Behnken (out of frame), mission specialist, re-located a temporary platform from the Special Purpose Dexterous Manipulator, or Dextre, to the station's truss structure and installed two handles on the robot.

Astronauts add room on ISS; spacecraft to study sun

Compiled by Susan Walden

The astronauts now have a room with a view at the International Space Station.

Crew members on Space Shuttle Endeavour and the ISS got their first look inside the orbiting outpost's newest module and cupola Feb. 12.

The 13-day mission delivered a connecting module that increases the space station's interior space node 3, called Tranquility, which provides additional room for crew members and many of the station's life support and environmental control systems. Attached to the node is a cupola, which is a robotic control station with six windows around its sides and another in the center that will give the astronauts a panoramic view of Earth, celestial objects and visiting spacecrafts.

STS-130 astronauts who went into the module initially wore goggles and masks to protect against floating debris. Shuttle Commander George Zamka and Mission Specialists Stephen Robinson and Kathryn Hire worked with station Commander Jeff Williams to outfit the vestibule between Unity and Tranquility after the hatch opening.

As that work continued, Endeavour Pilot Terry Virts and station Flight Engineer Soichi Noguchi transferred parts of the Advanced Resistive Exercise Device and an Air Revitalization System rack into Tranquility.

The mission includes three spacewalks.

There are four remaining space shuttle missions left. The next launch is scheduled for March 18, 1:34 p.m. on Discovery.

After launching Endeavour early Feb. 8, NASA employees and contractors got back to work for the Solar Dynamics Observatory mission.

The Atlas V roared to life Feb. 11 in the morning from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station sending the SDO into space on its mission to evaluate the complex mechanisms of the sun.

The spacecraft's orbit will be in a geosynchronous orbit 22,300 miles high. From that altitude, it will point its instruments at the sun and relay the readings instantly to a ground station in New Mexico. The research is expected to reveal the sun's inner workings by constantly taking high resolution images of the sun, collecting readings from inside the sun and measuring its magnetic field activity. This data is expected to give researchers the insight they need to eventually predict solar storms and other activity on the sun that can affect spacecraft in orbit, astronauts on the ISS and electronic and other systems on Earth.

Tastee Donuts – best donuts around

Susan Walden

If you're hankering for the best donuts you've ever tasted, or for that matter just about any bakery treats, you've got to go to Tastee Donuts.

Owner Leonard Whalen is tasting sweet success with his new business at 4950 S. Washington Avenue in Titusville, just south of the U.S. 1 and SR 50 intersection.

"I'm originally from Cincinnati and my dad owned bakeries there," he said. From the time Whalen could walk, he helped his dad and learned all about the bakery business as he grew into a man. Over the years he's worked at several bakeries, which he says has helped him become a supreme baker.

"But about 95 percent of my recipes come from my dad's bakery – great recipes that date back from the 1950s and 60s too."

Even though Tastee Donuts has only been open three months, it's becoming a household word in North Brevard.

One of the reasons Tastee Donuts has become so popular is because you just can't substitute freshness. Whalen works all night baking donuts, breads, coffee cakes and other pastries so his customers never have any products a day old. They're usually only a few hours old or just fresh right out of the oven.

When you walk in Tastee Donuts, the sweet aroma will drive you weak at the knees. And when you look at all the fresh delights staring before you, it's hard to make a decision as to what to order.

"My customers keep saying how they love my products," he said. "I enjoy what I do so even though it's work, it really isn't."

You can choose from 25 to 30 kinds of donuts. Even though donuts are the most popular items on Whalen's menu, you can choose from a wide variety of baked products.

Order through the drive-thru, take out or come in, sit and enjoy your order. Tastee Donuts also offers delicious beverages including coffee, milk and various cold beverages.

What's even sweeter than his bakery goods, is his prices. Get a half dozen donuts for $4.25 or a dozen for just $6.80.

Tastee Donuts is open daily from 1 a.m. – 1 p.m.

Cheer up your day and bring home a sack of the best bakery items you and your family have tasted – at Tastee Donuts.

Feeding those less fortunate

The Apollo Elementary K Kids, a service leadership program sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Titusville, organized a six-week food drive within their school to restock the Crossroads Community Church of God food bank located at 2115 Knox McRae Drive in Titusville. This is an annual project that ended Feb. 5. The club focuses on service to the community. The Kiwanis Club has served the Titusville community since 1923.

How to Show Kids You Care

When members of the U. S. Armed Forces are serving overseas, their absence can be especially difficult for their young children. Parents and grandparents can maintain strong family ties, assure these youngsters they are loved, and help them over the rough spots.

MOST IMPORTANT:

- Before the service member leaves for duty, set aside time to talk with children and encourage them to express their feelings and concerns. If they're confused or angry, kids may pretend they don't care. Cut through this "tough talk" to reach your child's heart.
- During the service member's absence, encourage kids to talk about their thoughts and feelings. They may be lonely for the absent parent and perhaps feel abandoned. They may fear for the parent's safety overseas, and they may be concerned about their own loss if the worst happens. Assure children that they are deeply loved.
- If you feel your child needs professional counseling, seek help immediately from the military, the school, or other resources in your community. Warning signs include changes in personality, anxiety or fear that is extreme, feelings of worthlessness, change in eating or sleeping habits, social isolation, unexplained outbursts or changes in mood, and inability to concentrate.

KEEPING KIDS' SPIRITS UP:

- Have your child prepare a scrapbook of his or her activities, big and small, and mail it to the absent parent or put it in a special place for the parent's return.
- Photograph children in school plays, ball games, and other events and mail (or e-mail) the pictures to the absent parent or put them in a special place for the parent's return. If you can't be there, give the child a disposable camera so he or she can capture the action.
- Sneak a funny picture or special treat into your kid's lunchbox or gym bag, to be discovered during the school day. If possible, ask the absent parent to send a note or photo for this purpose.

Titusville Driver's License Office worst customer service ever

My View
By
Susan Walden

I've been to the threshold of hell. It's the Department of Motor Vehicle Driver's License Office on SR 405 in Titusville.

It doesn't have to be hell, but the people make it that way.

A few weeks ago I had to go there to renew my driver's license. Sounds simple enough, right? Childbirth was easier (and I had 36 hours of labor and a C-section).

Nothing had changed – same address, I'm the same person, but there were more documents to show. I knew this before I went there because like a good citizen, I did my homework. I carefully extracted the information I needed, including my marriage license, showing my name changed from my maiden name to my married one.

I made an appointment online so I figured I had done all the right things to get my license renewed.

I walked in and was met by a line of people. I dutifully stood in back of the 5-people line. I made my way up to the desk by the door and the woman, not smiling, asked for my documents. Gee, I thought I saw that in a Nazi movie once. My nightmare began.

She told me emphatically that my marriage license wasn't valid. This year I will be married 25 years. I've lived overseas, worked for the government, had two secret clearances, two passports, but this little state office says it isn't legal.

I told her nicely that she must be mistaken. We were married at Fort Knox, Ky., which is a federal installation, so I didn't have a state cookie-cutter marriage license like the one she might be used to. The woman told me she'd pass me through but the guy in the back would probably agree with her and reject me. That's when I figured they might get brownie points, possibly bonus time off, for ushering people out the door instead of actually working with people. She gave me a number, which was eight numbers off from the one being served, and told me to sit.

First of all, why do I have to wait a half hour if I have an appointment and I'm getting a number like everyone else?

I couldn't wait to sit down and call my husband. This Italian-Irish gal was fired up.

"Yea, Greg, just thought I'd tell you we're not legally married according to this DMV. Apparently we've been living in sin nearly 25 years, have two illegitimate children and two illegitimate dogs," I said very loud, meeting chuckles in the room by the other people who were tired of waiting and feeling beat like a prisoner.

My husband said, "What?" He laughed and said it was the most ridiculous thing he'd ever heard.

"Yea, she wants me to go back home and get the 'real one,'" I said.

When my magic number was finally called I thought I'd get waited on, but was mistaken. That was just to sit in another room. Great service, people.

Finally, after 15 minutes sitting there, the guy in the back called me over. He looked unprofessional with his sunglasses tacked on his forehead as if he was going to run out any minute and go surfing. Maybe he wanted to look cool. Maybe he was an alien and he was hiding the other set of eyes. No, he was just arrogant.

Without smiling, he hung his head and asked for my documents. Again, like I was waltzing into a Nazi death camp.

The first document he scrutinized as if it was a Mensa puzzle was my birth certificate. He huffed and put his hand to his chin. It made me wonder what could possibly be wrong with my birth certificate.

After what seemed like five minutes, he began looking at the other documents.

"So, where did you get this Ann name?" he asked really snottily. "You weren't born with this middle name so did you just, like, make it up or something?"

"No, I was born Catholic and when I was 8 years old I was confirmed with the name Ann, so this is my middle name," I explained nicely, hoping he'd soften up.

"Well, lady, you can't just make names up and put it on legal documents because it just isn't legal," he said in a mocking tone. "Look at this – Susan A, Ann, what is this?"

"It's on my social security card and on everything I have," I said.

"Well, it isn't right," he said.

I've died and gone to a communist country. I suspected so, but it was confirmed when I walked into the Titusville DMV.

I must stop here and say I feel he disrespected my religion and that really bothers me. I guess state employees aren't given classes in respecting our nation's top five no-no's you don't mess with— race, religion, sex, age and national origin.

Then he looked at my marriage license.

"This isn't legal," he said holding it up with a smirk on his face, shaking his head. "You need to go home and get your marriage license."

"This is it. This is all I have," I said. I explained it was an Army wedding, and he said he knows the document isn't legal.

"Look, there's even white out on it because someone made a mistake," he said. He acted like he was getting perverse humor out of rejecting me. "It doesn't even have a seal on it."

"This piece of paper has been used for almost 25 years," I explained, narrowing my eyes, my face as red as my new Camaro. "I've gotten secret clearances and used it many times and the federal government does not have a problem with it, so what's yours?"

He gave me a five-minute history lesson on how the terrorists in 9-11 crashed the planes and how some were trained in Florida.

I didn't know they flew the planes because they had a driver's license. Don't you have to get a flying license? Come on, what does this have to do with a driver's license?

"Well, Florida is really cracking down. We had egg on our face from 9-11 and it won't happen again," he said.

"Well, I can assure you I'm just driving my car. I have no plans to kill Americans and I don't work for bin Laden. I was an Army wife, worked in the Army and the Air Force. Plus, since 9-11 I've renewed my license and I didn't have to go through this before. You are truly saying my marriage isn't legal? Are you kidding me?"

"No, lady, I didn't say your marriage wasn't legal."

"OK, if you say my marriage license isn't legal, then how can my marriage be legal?"

"It isn't the same thing," he said.

I was working with a real mental heavyweight here.

"Look, I know the county near Fort Knox has a record of it, so you'll have to request it and I'll give you a 30-day extension," he said.

"But the county is addressed right here on the front and the back. See the stamp? It shows the date it went into the Hardin County books," I said. "Do you think someone made this up? I even got two passports with this."

I said the magic word. Passport.

"Wait, you have a passport? Why didn't you tell me? Go home and get it and I'll give you the license," he said.

"Why does the passport matter? Is this like a game of cards where the passport trumps all other documents or something?" I asked.

"Well, if the federal government let you have a passport, then they thought the marriage license was OK, so it's OK with us."

"I've been telling you, and you can see by some of these documents, like my social security card, that the federal government is OK with my marriage license. Maybe it's because I was married by federal employees on a federal installation?"

I was instructed to go home, get it and he promised I could come back and be the next person he saw.

"And I bet it doesn't have Ann on it," he said it like a duel, a challenge of some weird sorts. I knew it had, so I just smirked at him.

I drove home cussing all the way. I was in between laughing because it was so ludicrous and crying from frustration.

I opened my fireproof box where we keep all our documents and there it was. "Ann" it said after Susan.

"Hee, hee you SOB!" I screamed. The dogs looked up at me like I was crazy.

I drove back to the DMV office and was stopped by the man sitting at the desk. He told me he had to see my documents. I gave them to him but told him I was told to come back and showed him my priority paper letting me get back in quickly.

You'll never believe what he said.

He shook his head, put his eyes up in the air, and said, "This document isn't legal," holding up my marriage license.

"Look slick, I've been through this twice, OK? This is why I'm back in here. Look, I promise when I really get married I'll invite you to the wedding, OK? Maybe you all should pay for it."

He wouldn't look at me. See, he knew his attitude was wrong and he couldn't look me in the eye. It was an epidemic there. It's easier to make fun of you, treat you like dirt and then reject you if you don't look someone in the eye.

"Here's your number," he said. The number was six off from the number called.

"No, I don't need a number. I was told to come back in and go back to the guy who instructed me to go home," I said.

"No, you have to have a number."

"Listen to me. I'm not sitting here again and I refuse to be treated like this any longer. I've been put through the ringer for two hours, so I'm going to see this guy now."

I walked up the few stairs and stood there. My "Mr. Sunglasses" in the corner motioned me over.

I stood back because he was helping two young men.

"I'm sick of going through this," one guy said to him. "I've been here since 11 a.m."

This was truly a torture chamber, I thought. When you die, if you're bad, you go here.

The two guys left and Mr. Sunglasses asked me to come up to him. I plopped down my passport almost giddy with excitement to see him open it and read "Ann." He turned the page on the passport.

"Wow, it says Ann."

"Gee, fancy that," I said with a smirk.

He even complained that he was having a bad day. He was having a bad day? Are you kidding me?

I told him I guessed I still have to call Hardin County to request something other than this marriage license because I didn't ever want to go through this again. I said at some point my passport will expire and maybe they won't take the marriage license any more. And get this. Do you know what he said?

"No it will be OK because you just show them this new driver's license."

Here are my points on this nightmare. Someone needs to investigate this DMV Driver's License office on a number of things.

First and foremost is the way they treat their customers. I saw one woman employee henchman at the door berate and interrupt a man who was trying to explain something but couldn't get a word in edgewise. He had an accent but could speak English well, if she'd ever let him speak.

I truly believe they get happiness out of rejecting people and finding ways to just say "no." I understand they have to scrutinize documents but this can be done without the attitude as if they were God, judge and jury.

There's no sense in having an appointment, because the ordeal takes at least two hours and you have to wait on several lines anyway.

They're asking way too many people, who are angry, to go home and get something else. They should hope they don't say this to someone who's on the edge because it could turn into a messy, horrible scene. Let's be clear, I certainly don't advocate this, but there are many people on the edge. Why push it?

Along with losing the terrible attitude and lack of professionalism, they need to dress more appropriately and get those sunglasses off their faces.

Their office motto is service, integrity, courtesy, professionalism, innovation and excellence. That's a laugh because I challenge anyone to tell me they have any of these things. Never had in the nine years I've lived here.

According to several longtime Titusville residents, this office has a bad reputation for treating their customers badly – so badly that they've gone to other offices instead over the years.

It's only a matter of time before someone has a heart attack right there on the floor from the stress. No one should go through their attitude and badgering.

People need jobs. If these employees don't like their jobs, they should do us all a big favor and walk out the door. I'm sure we can find people around here who would love to fill the jobs and be a lot nicer.

My experience wasn't an isolated incident. In April, my son and I were there so he could get a learner's permit. It was such a nightmare, my kid even told them off and I didn't stop him because he was 100 percent correct.

The person you meet at the door needs to be nice. We are not going into a prison camp. We are not substandard creatures. Rolling the eyes, tsk-tsking, and shaking the head is unacceptable behavior. Period.

I encourage everyone who has ever had a problem with this DMV Driver's License office to contact the state of Florida Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles office. Julie L. Jones is the executive director. E-mail her at executivedirector@flhsmv.gov. I did and this is what Jones wrote back:

First, let me apologize for the unprofessional service you received at our Titusville office while renewing your driver license. We are focused on customer service and it is important to me that our customers have positive experiences with us and are treated professionally when doing business with our agency.

I have asked that this incident be addressed and I appreciate you calling it to my attention.

Parents have web site

Brevard Public Schools announces a Web site that provides information and resources to help parents and school communities understand the Center for Disease Control and the Florida Department of Health's recommendations for influenza during the 2009-10 school year.

The site may be accessed by going to www.brevardschools.org and clicking on the link on the home page that says "H1N1 Swine Flu Communications for BPS Parents and School Community." Information on this site will be updated as new data becomes available.

Give to SPCA

Come in to the SPCA at 455 Cheney Highway and "adopt" an engraved mouse or bone on the wall's dog house. There are three sizes with three prices - $100, $250 and $500.

Applications can be obtained online at www.spcanorthbrevard.com or stop by the facility and pick one up. If you would like to make a donation, SPCA would be very grateful.

Spay/neuter your pets

The Central Brevard Humane Society's new state-of-the-art "low cost" spay/neuter & wellness clinic is now open. This facility is located directly behind the shelter at 1020 Cox Road in Cocoa. The hours of operation are Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Services include spaying/neutering, vaccinations, heartworm prevention, flea and tick treatment programs and microchipping.

To schedule an appointment, call (321) 636-3343.

Lost a pet?

Brevard Animal Services & Enforcement reminds citizens that its web site, www.brevardanimalservices.com lists lost or stray pets that have been picked up by Animal Services & Enforcement officers, or dropped off at the South Area or North Area Care Center shelters.

On the Brevard Animal Services home page, there are links for Lost Pets, Adoptable Pets and other important information. From the Lost Pets page or the Adoptable Pets page, web visitors will find options regarding the type of animal to search for: cats, dogs, or other.

For information about lost or adoptable pets, call (321) 633-2024.

Join MOPS

MOPS understands that the years from infancy through kindergarten are foundational in a mother-child relationship and are filled with unique needs. MOPS exists to meet the needs of every mom - urban and suburban moms, stay-at-home and working moms, teen, single, and married moms - moms with different lifestyles who all share a similar desire to be the very best moms they can be! MOPS is for Moms to be, new moms, and all moms of children from infancy through kindergarten. Meetings are the 2nd and 4th Monday (Sept through May). Meeting fees are $5 (scholarships available). Group activities are planned throughout the year, so don't hesitate to call and join us at any time of the year! MOPS meets at Indian River City United Methodist Church located at 1355 Highway 50, Titusville, 32780. FPL can help

With rising costs of electricity coming at a particularly difficult time for its customers, FPL is committed to helping customers become more energy-efficient. A leaky duct system is one possible factor that can lead to a higher bill. In fact, two-thirds of all homes have leaky ducts that go undetected.

Identifying leaky ducts is fairly easy to do, and with FPL's help, it is fast and affordable. FPL customers who call to schedule a duct analysis performed by an FPL Energy Expert receive a complete report of repairs needed and a list of independent contractors qualified to make the repairs. Additionally, FPL offers its customers incentives to help cover the cost of repairs.

Buy some plants

The freeze damage to most local residents' landscapes has prompted the Titusville Garden Club to resume its very popular plant sale at its center, 5275 Sisson Rd., Feb. 19 from 10 a.m. – 5 p.m. and Feb. 20, 8 a.m. – 2 p.m.

Plants include azaleas, carnellias, gardenias, hydrangeas, plumbago, "old roses," and more. For more info, call Cathy at 269-2106.

Go to flea market

Titusville Sale and Power Squadron holds a Nautical Flea Market March 6, 8 a.m. at the waterfront of the Titusville Municipal Marina. For more information or to reserve a spot, call Bob Scott at 604-2526.

Find your past

The Genealogical Society of North Brevard meets March 2 at 6 p.m. in the Hannemann Room of the Titusville Public Library, 2121 South Hopkins Ave. Patrice Green will present "Family History Web Sites: Why, How, and HTML (Not!)". Program is free and public is invited. For info call (321) 636-3089.

Annual festival coming

The Indian River Festival is April 15-18.

Get ride tickets in advance now at the Titusville Chamber of Commerce for $15. Advance general admission tickets are $2, saving you $2 at the gate.

For more information, go to www.brevard-productions.com or call 615-8111. Or contact the chamber at 267-3036.

Go to native plants series

TEC is starting a series of presentations on sustainable living and homes once a month. They will be starting with a presentation by Members from Sea Rocket Chapter Florida Native Plant Society on the importance of using Florida native plants in your own front and backyards. The presentation will be held at Titusville City Hall.

Native plants are not only drought and salt tolerant, but will survive our winter freezes much better than tropical or exotic plants. There will be information on where to purchase native plants and the care of the plants after a freeze.

The benefits of using native plants for our wildlife will also be discussed. Questions and answer session will follow the presentation.

For more information, call Afi Fancon Planning Department, City of Titusville at (321)-269-6379.
